The IEC Legal Access Program entitles each IEC member company to fifteen (15) minutes per month of FREE legal advice from Jordan Schrader PC attorney Robert F. Blackmore. If the member's question cannot be sufficiently answered within the allotted 15 minutes, Bob will estimate the amount of additional time he believes the answer will require. The member may then determine the course of action.

IEC Legal Access services are intended to apply to situation-specific questions related to the member's business. Members can ask about corporate or business matters, employment problems, contracts, water rights, land use, leasing or buying operations and property, regulatory matters, liens, equipment loan documents, line of credit and banking issues, liability associated with accidents, and construction disputes. Personal advice and advice relating to worker's compensation, immigration, naturalization, and accounting issues are not included in the IEC Legal Access program. However, Jordan Schrader will be happy to provide members with referrals to specialists in those matters. If a member calls regarding a dispute, Jordan Schrader will first run a preliminary conflicts check to be certain there is no conflict of interest with any of our existing clients.

Bob Blackmore and Jordan Schrader PC are committed to offering responsive, efficient and results-oriented legal services to their clients. IEC encourages you to take advantage of this Legal Access program so that you can resolve issues before they become business problems.
